

Satellite radio is one of the best things to happen to drivers in a long time. If terrestrial broadcasters feel threatened, they should do something to innovate their services and offer us something worthwhile. FM and AM broadcast is mostly junk advertising and self serving DJs. I love satellite radio and the choice and quality it offers. I want to get my traffic and weather via satellite and ditch my car radio completely. Who is the NAB that they should dictate what and how I get the services I want? Do not stifle competition and choice. We are living in an age where big rich corporations are deciding things for the us. Corporations are given rights over individual citizens. If broadcast radio feels threatened by satellite radio, its because satellite is finally delivering what it is that people want. Stop using legislation to stifle technology that threatens profits. Make the whiners get off thier lazy butts and think of other ways to make a buck.
